

Coming clean

IT was like the epicentre of a major disaster when members of the army, police, ambulance, fire brigade and members of Milsearch gathered for training for mustard gas decontamination that will start today.

Thankfully it was only for training and was orchestrated by the Department of Defence's Georgia Derham with Milsearch special projects manager Dave Humphreys and his men in charge of the training of the emergency services.